Dear Parents,

I hope you all had an enjoyable week! The kids did a good job of fitting a week's worth of work into 3  $\frac{1}{2}$  days! Please remember that the students do not have school tomorrow or Monday. School will resume on Tuesday. Hopefully the nice long weekend will give everyone a chance to feel better and get some rest!

Thank you so much to everyone who has brought in snacks for the kids! We are stalked up and the students really appreciate all of the goodies 😊 Here is a look at the week ahead:

Reading: We will be reading Animal Teams and learning about the vowel digraphs y and ey. The story quiz and spelling test will be next Friday.

Math: We finished up our unit on place value and I am so proud of how well the students did with the concept. Next we will start our unit on adding and subtracting larger numbers with regrouping. Please make sure your child is practicing his or her math facts at home because this will help tremendously with this chapter.

Science: We will continue working on our vertebrates books as well as reading in our science books. We have some fun activities coming up in science that I'm sure the kids will love!

I am looking forward to meeting with you at conferences tonight to discuss your child's progress! Working together really helps the students succeed! I hope everyone has a great weekend!

~Annie
